International Migration and the Crisis

COURSE STRUCTURE

3 weeks of classes

Learning via lectures, guest lectures and student presentations (Monday through Thursday)

Participatory observations via field trips

Visits to NGOs working in the field

Writing an academic article on global migration and crisis

ACADEMIC PROGRAM

This course presents an overview of the main issues raised by the cross-border movements of people. It will introduce students to current trends in migration flows, to the different types of human mobility and the dynamics behind them, and to governments' responses to the social, political and legal challenges raised by international migration.

The course material is organized to reflect on the social issues such as social mobility, poverty, gender, inequality and citizenship as they relate to different types of international mobility. Taking the recent mass refugee movement as the case study, this course aims to offer participants an understanding of the complex and varied nature of global migration in general and forced migration in specific and their centrality to global, regional and national processes of political, social and economic change and of the needs of displaced people themselves.
