COURSE DESCRIPTION

International migration has become a major political issue worldwide. This course presents an overview of the main issues raised by the cross-border movements of people. It will introduce students to current trends in migration flows, to the different types of human mobility and the dynamics behind them, and to governments' responses to the social, political and legal challenges raised by international migration. The course material is organized to reflect on the social issues such as social mobility, poverty, gender, inequality and citizenship as they relate to different types of international mobility. Particularly, we will look at changing trends in global mobility, at theories explaining international mobility, forced migration, migrant integration; the impact of migration in sending and receiving societies, the basic methods used for analyzing migration related issues. This course will not only seek to learn from, but also to evaluate, critique, and expand existing methods. In addition, students will have the opportunity to develop their own professional thinking in this field.

COURSE AIM

Taking the recent mass refugee movement as the case study, this course aims to offer participants an understanding of the complex and varied nature of global migration in general and forced migration in specific and their centrality to global, regional and national processes of political, social and economic change and of the needs of displaced people themselves.

On completion participants will:

• Develop a broad understanding of key concepts and debates in global migration;
• Gain skills in critical analysis and the ability to plan, organize and carry out research into aspects of global migration as well as forced migration and refugees
• Develop an ability to contribute new perspectives to the study of migration.
• Produce an investigative piece for a publication.
• Gain an understanding of the dilemmas facing policy-makers at both national and international level
• Gain ability to help transfer theoretical knowledge to policy-oriented research

COURSE STRUCTURE

The summer school is structured around three main methodological axis:
• Learning via lectures, guest lectures and student presentations,
• Participatory observations via field trips,
• Writing an academic article on global migration and crisis

FIELD TRIPS

Field trips will take place in the afternoon.

1. NGO Trip- ASAM- Association for Solidarity with Asylum Seekers and Migrants
2. Aksaray- Aksaray, a neighbourhood in the centre of Istanbul, is the first point of contact for many Syrian refugees looking for help to start a new life.
3. Sultanbeyli- Refugees Association- The association was established in 2014 to seek solutions to the problems of people who have left their country and are in need of international protection. They work in cooperation with the private sector, NGOs and public institutions and organizations to help solve problems about vital needs and create social inclusion. It is operating in many fields for the Syrians who have left their countries because of war and took refuge in Turkey. Priority activities include shelter, health, education and employment.
4. NGO Trip- Tarlabası Community Centre and AD-DAR (Syrian Community Centre)
COURSE ORGANIZATION AND REQUIREMENTS

Students are expected to come to class having read the material assigned for each session. Lectures will include both the material in the readings and additional information. Lectures will include both the material in the readings and additional information. Your active participation in class is very important. It can greatly affect your final grade in one way or another. Students are expected to be informed about both the reading material content and in-class lectures and discussions. The final grades will be based on:

Critical Reflection Papers: 40%
Group Presentation: 20%
Final Exam: 40%

You can take make-up exams only if you have documented medical emergencies. There will be only one make-up exam. Students are responsible for all announcements made in classes even if they are absent that day.

Information on critical reflection papers:

Students are required to write 4 (out of a possible 6) brief critical reflection papers on the readings for the different substantive sections of the course. These are intended to support you to actively engage with the literature and the issues discussed in class. Each critical reflection is worth 5%.

1- Migration Politics and Policies/ Integration and citizenship: readings for week 1- day 2 due 27 June
2- Borders and Irregular Migration: readings for week 1- day 3 due 28 June
3- Undocumented Migrants: readings for week 2- day 1 due 3 July
4- Syrian refugees in Turkey: readings for week 2- day 2: due 4 July
5- Gender and Migration: readings for week 3- day 1: due 10 July
6- Forced Migration: readings for week 3- day 2: due 11 July

All critical reflections are due in class on the due date.

The critical reflections are not intended to be a summary of the readings. It is intended a series of short ‘thought pieces’ that convey how you are thinking about the material, thoughts about specific points or issues raised, or conclusions you might draw. For instance, you can disagree with an author’s arguments or conclusions; to extend their analysis somewhat different directions; to contribute different theoretical insights; to raise additional questions or points that you think are important; or you may wish to make links between readings in different weeks, or draw analytical connections to other current events.

Each reflection should be about 250 words (1000 words total). It is crucial to include citations for the readings you address.

Information on group presentation
The aim of this task is to improve your oral presentation and team working skills and to invite you to reflect on the concepts and theories we cover in class.

Students are required to deliver a group presentation (5-10 minutes) based on the course topics.

Grading Criteria:

These assignments will be graded on the following criteria:

a) Demonstrates a sound grasp of the week’s readings

b) Offers some additional insights, questions, or thoughts

c) Reflections are connected to broader themes in the course and/or sociological concepts and theories

d) Should be well written, clearly organised, and persuasively argued

READING MATERIALS

Reading materials are available at Copyland and some are downloadable from Suna Kıratağ Library electronic databases.

Statement on Academic Honesty with Emphasis on Plagiarism

Koç University expects all its students to perform course-related activities in accordance with the rules set forth in the Student Code of Conduct (http://vpaa.ku.edu.tr/academic/student-code-of-conduct). Actions considered as academic dishonesty at Koç University include but are not limited to cheating, plagiarism, collusion, and impersonating. This statement’s goal is to draw attention to cheating and plagiarism related actions deemed unacceptable within the context of Student Code of Conduct:

All individual assignments must be completed by the student himself/herself, and all team assignments must be completed by the members of the team, without the aid of other individuals. If a team member does not contribute to the written documents or participate in the activities of the team, his/her name should not appear on the work submitted for evaluation.

Plagiarism is defined as ‘borrowing or using someone else’s written statements or ideas without giving written acknowledgement to the author’. Students are encouraged to conduct research beyond the course material, but they must not use any documents prepared by current or previous students, or notes prepared by instructors at Koç University or other universities without properly citing the source. Furthermore, students are expected to adhere to the Classroom Code of Conduct (http://vpaa.ku.edu.tr/academic/classroom-code-of-conduct) and to refrain from all forms of unacceptable behavior during lectures. Failure to adhere to expected behavior may result in disciplinary action.
There are two kinds of plagiarism: Intentional and accidental. Intentional plagiarism (Example: Using a classmate’s homework as one’s own because the student does not want to spend time working on that homework) is considered intellectual theft, and there is no need to emphasize the wrongfulness of this act. Accidental plagiarism, on the other hand, may be considered as a ‘more acceptable’ form of plagiarism by some students, which is certainly not how it is perceived by the University administration and faculty. The student is responsible from properly citing a source if he/she is making use of another person’s work. For an example on accidental plagiarism, please refer to the document titled “An Example on Accidental Plagiarism”.

If you are unsure whether the action you will take would be a violation of Koç University’s Student Code of Conduct, please consult with your instructor before taking that action.

An Example on Accidental Plagiarism

This example is taken from a document prepared by the City University of New York.

The following text is taken from Elaine Tyler May’s Myths and Realities of the American Family:

“Because women's wages often continue to reflect the fiction that men earn the family wage, single mothers rarely earn enough to support themselves and their children adequately. And because work is still organized around the assumption that mothers stay home with children, even though few mothers can afford to do so, child-care facilities in the United States remain woefully inadequate.”

Below, there is an excerpt from a student’s homework, who made use of May’s original text:

“As Elaine Tyler May points out, “women's wages often continue to reflect the fiction that men earn the family wage” (588). Thus many single mothers cannot support themselves and their children adequately. Furthermore, since work is based on the assumption that mothers stay home with children, facilities for day care in this country are still “woefully inadequate.” (May 589)”.

You may think that there is no plagiarism here since the student is citing the original author. However, this is an instance of accidental plagiarism. Although the student cites May and uses quotation marks occasionally, the rest of the sentences, more specifically the following section: “Thus many single mothers cannot support themselves and their children adequately. Furthermore, since work is based on the assumption that mothers stay home with children, facilities for day care in this country are still “woefully inadequate.” (May 589)” almost exactly duplicates May’s original language. So, in order to avoid plagiarism, the student either had to use quotation marks for the rest of the sentences as well, or he/she had to paraphrase May’s ideas by using not only his/her own words, but his/her own original ideas as well. You should keep in mind that accidental plagiarism often occurs when the student does not really understand the original text but still tries to make use of it. Understanding the original text and understanding why you agree or disagree with the ideas proposed in that text is crucial both for avoiding plagiarism and for your intellectual development.
