WHAT PROBLEM ARE WE SOLVING?

We all share a vision for our common humanity, but somehow we've overemphasized profit, growth and organizational metrics over inner and outer peace and connection to others and the world. Millennials will make up 75% of the workforce by 2030, and they are asking for new ways of leading that can benefit all of us and our planet.

At Dalai Lama Fellows, we seek to broaden and deepen leaders' perspectives on what's best for humanity as a whole and for generations to come, calling on leaders to think and behave differently, and to seek realistic, innovative and expansive ways to address global challenges.

WHAT DO WE DO?

Our Fellowship offers emerging leaders a rigorous, interdisciplinary program on ways to be a different kind of leader, a leader that connects and cares for self, extends genuine compassion to others, and works for our common humanity. Fellows cultivate practices in mind training for increasing self-awareness, self-care and resilience, for connecting with others and working across differences, and in building solutions for generations to come.

Over the course of a year, with the support of mentors and coaches, each Fellow designs and implements an original Field Project addressing a global challenge. Upon graduation, Fellows join a LifeLong Community, where they connect with and support each other while continuing to advance their leadership journeys.
